PROJECT OVERVIEW

The Tish Non Village Community Center in Loleta, California provides an excellent public space for Bear River tribal members. The complex supports the tribe with social, governmental and cultural services, as well as employee and council offices and meeting rooms. The center will also provide daily childcare services, a center for the elderly, and a full service restaurant. The tribal hall will accommodate 200 people and be available for local events. Detached from the main building is a smaller structure housing a curator's facility for processing artifacts found in the field, as well as a library.

PROJECT HIGHLIGHTS

- Designed for LEED certification
- Sustainable features such as: green roofs, day lighting, natural ventilation, hydronic floor heating, and low-flow restroom fixtures
- Finished materials made largely of recycled content
- The building is oriented to grand views of the Tribe's ancestral Eel River.
