The Historic Train Station and Flagstaff Visitor Center

Located on Route 66 in the historic downtown train station, the Flagstaff Visitor Center is your resource for personalized travel information, free guides, maps and brochures. The gift shop features a wide selection of Flagstaff and train-themed souvenirs including clothing, books, maps, Route 66 memorabilia and locally-crafted gifts.

Wupatki National Monument

Rock walls of the 800-year-old pueblos dot a desert landscape once home to thousands of people. Visitor Center exhibits explain how they survived by farming, hunting and gathering, as well as trading. Short trails lead to Wupatki, Lomaki, Wukoki and other pueblos. The scenic drive to nearby Sunset Crater National Monument climbs rapidly from desert to mountain landscapes.

The Clark Telescope at Lowell Observatory

Open to the public, visitors can peer at celestial objects in the night sky through telescopes or visit the instrument that helped Clyde Tombaugh discover Pluto at Lowell Observatory in 1930. Tour the campus and experience the Universe through widescreen multimedia shows, exhibits, live presentations and SlipherVision, the immersive space theater.

The Museum Club on Route 66

The Museum Club, a Route 66 icon in Flagstaff, was built by taxidermist Dean Eldredge in 1931 of which he touted as "the biggest log cabin in Arizona." Over the years it was operated as a museum, taxidermist shop and trading post, and was visited by scores of Route 66 travelers. Later dubbed "The Zoo" by locals, the Museum Club eventually became a popular bar, country music venue and dance hall which it has remained to this day.

Traditional Hopi Katsinas

Hopi people live primarily on three mesas about 70 miles from Flagstaff. In Hopi culture, the katsinas are known to be the spirits of deities, natural elements or animals, or the deceased ancestors of the Hopi. Prior to each katsina ceremony, the men of the village will spend days studiously making figures in the likeness of the katsinam represented in that particular ceremony. The figures are then passed on to the daughters of the village during the ceremony.

The Historic Weatherford Hotel

John Weatherford opened the then $10,000 Hotel Weatherford on January 1, 1900. The Coconino Sun reported, "There is no finer hotel in the whole southwest." Today, the Weatherford Hotel is a Flagstaff landmark known for it's Victorian decor, balcony views of historic downtown, Charly's restaurant, 3 speakeasy-themed bars and annual New Year's Eve Pine Cone Drop.

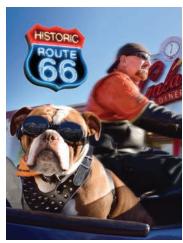

Flagstaff, Arizona is a colorful destination for all types of travelers, located in the mountains of northern Arizona, just a one hour drive from Grand Canyon National Park. The city sits at 7,000 feet (2,135 meters) elevation in the midst of the world's largest contiguous Ponderosa pine forest and is a year-round hub of activity known for authentic western and Native American culture, endless outdoor recreation and a safe small town environment. Flagstaff is a premier stop on America's iconic Route 66 and makes a perfect home base to explore some of the USA's most spectacular scenery.
