SECTION I INTRODUCTION

Chapter 1 What Is Hypertext? 3

By Emily Berk and Joseph Devlin

Nodes and Links—The Nuclear Elements of All Hypertexts 4

Hypertext Readers, Hypertext Authors 5

Navigating the Information Web 5

Chapter 2 Why Hypertext? 9

By Joseph Devlin and Emily Berk

Chapter 3 A Hypertext Timeline 13

By Emily Berk and Joseph Devlin

SECTION II TYPES OF HYPERTEXTS

Chapter 4 Text-Only Hypertexts 19

By Emily Berk

Not every picture is worth a 1000 words! 19

Performance 20

Economy 20

Ease of Development 21

Portability 21

Chapter 5 Hypermedia 23

By Oliver Picher, Emily Berk, Joseph Devlin, and Ken Pugh

Hazards and Rewards of Hypermedia 24

The Media of Hypermedia 27

Techniques that Make Multimedia Possible	33
Introduction to the Design of Hypermedia Applications	36
The Unique Challenges of Producing Hypermedia Applications	39
Production and Authoring Requirements	48

SECTION III CONVENTIONS FOR WRITERS/READERS OF HYPERTEXT

Chapter 6	Composing Hypertext: A Discussion for Writing Teachers	55
	By John M. Slatin
	Defining Hypertext	55
	The Goal of Hypertext	56
	Composing Hypertext	56
Chapter 7	Toward a Paradigm for Reading Hypertexts: Making Nothing Happen in Hypermedia Fiction	65
	By Stuart Moulthrop
Chapter 8	Selfish Interaction or Subversive Texts and the Multiple Novel	79
	By Michael Joyce

SECTION IV AUTOMATIC VS. HAND GENERATION

Chapter 9	Automated Conversion	95
	By Rob Riner
	The Decision to Automate	95
	Detailed Procedures Involved in Conversion	99
	Open Issues for Translation	108
Chapter 10	Automating the Conversion of Text Into Hypertext	113
	By Thomas C. Rearick
	Automation of Text Preprocessing	114
	Methodologies for Defining Links	115
	Linking By Direct Manipulation	116
	Technologies for Computer Assisted Linking	118
	Alternative Strategies for Improving Productivity	121
	The SmartText Electronic Document Construction Set	123

SECTION V

DESIGNING HYPERTEXTS

Chapter 11	Editing to Structure a Reader's Experience	143
	By Ben Shneiderman, Charles Kreitzberg, and Emily Berk
	Author's Goals In Structuring a Hypertext	144
	Conflict between Physical and Logical Structure	145
	Description of Hyperties	145
	Size and Configuration of Nodes	146
	Links	152
	Global Structures that Can Help Readers	155
Chapter 12	Structuring Interactive Multimedia Fiction	165
	By Geri Gay
	Features of Hypermedia Systems	166
	Types of Interactivity	169
	Designing an Interactive Fiction Program	171
	Design Considerations in the El Avion Hispano Program	174
	Guidelines	176
Chapter 13	Tools for Designing Hyperdocuments	179
	By Franca Garzotto, Paolo Paolini, Daniel Schwabe, and Mark Bernstein
	Authoring in the Large	180
	Prescriptive Approaches to Structuring Large Hypertexts	181
	Constructive Approaches to Structuring Large Hypertexts	184
	A Model-Based Approach	189
	Examples of Hypertext Modeling	193
Chapter 14	Tools for Authoring Hypertexts	209
	By Ernest Perez
	Tools for Authoring Hypertexts	209
	Text Editors and Word Processors	210
	Graphic Editing Tools	211
	Hypertext-Specific Tools	212
	The Master Plan: A Hypertext Authoring Model	220

SGML and the Future of Text-to-Hypertext Conversion	132
Example of Automated Link Generation	133

SECTION VI LICENSING AND PROTECTION OF ELECTRONICALLY PUBLISHED INFORMATION

Chapter 15	Intellectual Property and Licensing Concerns By Stephen L. Haynes	227	Chapter 19	The Navigation Problem Reconsidered By Mark Bernstein	285
	Traditional Intellectual Property Factors	227		The Navigation Problem	285
	Intellectual Property Concerns			Does the Navigation Problem Exist?	287
	Unique to Hypertext	232		The Navigation Problem in Linear Texts	287
	Licensing Factors (Author vs. Publisher)	234		Distractions and Deceptions	288
	Looking Ahead	240		Deliberate Hypertext Disorientation	289
				Effective Use of Disorientation	293
Chapter 16	Intellectual Property Issues in Multimedia Productions By Stephen Ian McIntosh	243	Chapter 20	Ordering the Information Graph By H. Van Dyke Parunak	299
	Text	243		Why Do We Need To Order the Information Graph?	300
	Graphics	245		How Can We Order the Graph?	301
	Still Photos	245		What Kinds of Linkage Patterns are There and How Are They Useful?	305
	Film and Video	246		What Kinds of Link Types Are There and How Are They Useful?	313
	Music and Sound	247
	Software	252
	Talent	257

Chapter 17 Copyright Considerations of Hypertext Producers:

Imaging and Document Conversion By Patrice Lyons, Esq.	259	Chapter 21	Integrating Search and Retrieval with Hypertext By Edward A. Fox, Qi Fan Chen, and Robert K. France	329
Subject Matter of Copyright	260		Necessary Capabilities	331
Initial Reproductions	262		Progress Toward Unified Access	333
Digital Conversion Process	263		Previous Work	338
Characteristics of Technology	263		CODER	339
Derivative Works	265		Recommendations for Integration	342
Moral Rights of Authors	266

SECTION VII ISSUES FOR HYPERTEXT READERS: NAVIGATION IN A NON-LINEAR MEDIUM

Chapter 18	Navigating in Hypermedia By Geri Gay and Joan Mazur	271	Chapter 22	Artificial Intelligence and Hypermedia By Alan Littleford	357
	Definition of Navigation	271		Intelligent Information Retrieval	357
	Challenges of Navigating Hypermedia Programs	272		The Complications of Hypermedia	363
	Global Navigation of a Program	272		Artificial Intelligence	364
	Characteristics of Effective Navigational Tools	275		Applying AI to Hypermedia Documentation	368
	Research on Navigational Tools for Hypermedia	276		It's Deja Vu All Over Again	373
				Theory Into Practice—Hyperbase	373
				Current State of AI and Hypertext	376
				Computer Aided Document Engineering (CADE)	376

SECTION VIII INTEGRATING HYPERTEXT WITH OTHER TECHNOLOGIES

SECTION IX INDUSTRIAL STRENGTH HYPERTEXT

Chapter 23	Toward Industrial Strength Hypermedia By H. Van Dyke Parunak	381
	What's the Problem?	381
	What Does Hypermedia Have To Offer?	387
	What Will It Take to Solve the Problem?	389
Chapter 24	Knowledge-Domain Interoperability and an Open Hyperdocument System By Douglas C. Engelbart	397
	Interoperability in an Individual's Knowledge Workshop	398
	Interoperability in a Group's Knowledge Workshop	399
	Interoperability Across Time and Space	400
	Interoperability Across Knowledge Domains	401
	The Large Matrix Organization	402
	Some General Assumptions	407
	Essential Elements of an OHS	408
	Hyperdocuments In a General Integrated Architecture	410
	The Interoperable OHS Environment	410
	The Interoperability Investment	410
	The OHS Movement	412

Chapter 25	Work Group Automation and Hypertext By Peter M. Benton, and Joseph Devlin	415
	The 90s—The Decade of Work Group Automation	415
	History of Networked Hypertext Systems	416
	Problems and Opportunities Specific To Networked Hypertext	417
	Examples of Complex Collaborative Efforts	420

SECTION X THE FUTURE OF HYPERTEXT

Chapter 26	Standards for Hypertext By Joseph Devlin	437
	Standardizing Content: Borrowing Existing Standards	438
	User Interface	441
	Are There Hypertext-Specific Standards?	441

Chapter 27

	Breaking Frames: Hyper-Mass Media By John McDauid	445
	The Media Ecosystem	446
	What Is Hypermedia?	446
	So What?	447
	The Medium Is the Mirage	448
	The Word and Its World	449
	The Text Remains the Same	450
	Hypermedia: Web of Maya or Isis' Net?	452
	The Potential of Hypermedia Discourse	455
	Appendix A: Case Studies	459
Case 1	Hypertext and Journalism: Towards a New Mass Medium By Wayne MacPhail	460
Case 2	ACM's Hypertext and Hypermedia Publishing Projects By Edward Fox, Bernard Rous, and Gary Marchionini	465
Case 3	DaTa Knowledgebase Systems™ (Deloitte & Touche Accounting & Auditing Knowledgebase Systems) By Bruce I. Winters, Neil Larson, and Anthony Philips	468
Case 4	ML INFO—An On-Line Multimedia Information Center By Lily Diaz and Halsey Minor	475
Case 5	The Perseus Project By Cynthia J. Bannon	480
Case 6	PathMAC: An Alternative Approach to Medical School Education at Cornell School of Medicine By Lily Diaz	488
Case 7	Grapevine Described By Robert Campbell and Patricia Hanlon	493
Case 8	Guide To Opportunities in Volunteer Archaeology: Case Study on the Use of a Hypertext System in a Museum Exhibit By Catherine Plaisant	498
Case 9	Rediscovering Pompeii By Ruth Giellman	506

Case 10	Electronic Music Lover's Companion: An Interactive Guide to Classic Electronic Music By Thom Holmes	512
Case 11	If Monks Had Macs... By Brian Thomas	519
Case 12	Xanadu By Harold Berk	524
Case 13	Storyspace: Hypertext and the Process of Writing By Mark Bernstein	529
Appendix B:	A Hypertext Glossary By Emily Berk	535
Appendix C:	Hypertext and Hypermedia: A Selected Bibliography By Terence Harpold	555

Hypertext / Hypermedia Handbook

Hypertext and hypermedia are shattering the barriers imposed by conventional information storage and retrieval systems. The Hypertext/Hypermedia Handbook is the authoritative reference guide to designing and implementing on-line documentation and training materials. Written by many of the foremost hypertext designers, this handbook includes chapters describing—

- Powerful tools for designing, authoring, and testing computer-based documentation and literature
- Pros and cons of automatic hypertext production
- How to achieve dramatic cost savings in industrial applications
- Legal issues confronting on-line information providers
- Detailed case histories: how and why current projects were implemented in hypertext and what was learned from these experiences

Complete with an exhaustive bibliography and liberally illustrated, the Hypertext/Hypermedia Handbook is an invaluable resource for designers and planners of computer-based documentation, training, and entertainments.

About the Editors

Emily Berk and Joseph Devlin are principles of Armadillo Associates, Inc., a multimedia consulting company. Ms. Berk has served as project manager, designer, and programmer on a score of multimedia and hypermedia projects. Mr. Devlin was founding editor of Software Digest and continues to pioneer techniques for testing computer hardware, software, and documentation systems.
