Homelessness is a devastating life event, but it’s even harder as a single parent with a young child. When Sam found himself without a home, he and his son moved from shelter to shelter struggling to stay afloat. Recently, Sam and his son received supportive housing that gave them a second chance at a stable future.

Sharell used to be a shy high school student who was unsure of her capabilities. Thanks to the Young Civic Leaders Program (YCLP) of United Way of Greater Los Angeles, Sharell learned how to advocate for her classmates’ futures and her own.

Jose and Karina are parents to four children, and Jose, a grocery store distributor, is the sole provider. Free income tax assistance from United Way volunteers and support from a tax credit will enable their son to be the first in the family to graduate college. He is now a student at Cal State L.A.
United Way of Greater Los Angeles’ Emerging Leaders is a network of passionate young professionals dedicated to developing philanthropic leadership skills. Emerging Leaders build connections with other influential leaders, pursue professional development opportunities, and participate in volunteer initiatives, such as mentoring students in United Way’s Young Civic Leaders Program.

Your participation as an Emerging Leader helps United Way of Greater Los Angeles build powerful impact partnerships and initiatives that create housing solutions, quality education and economic mobility for everyone in our community.
